Arrupe Center Teaching Fellows

HSB faculty work with Arrupe Center to produce ethics-based pedagogical enhancements to courses and curricula. Support will typically be provided through the following process:

1. HSB faculty submit ethics-based teaching proposals to the Arrupe Center.
2. Arrupe Center faculty work with HSB faculty to infuse ethical theory, methods, and decision-making perspectives in courses and curricula:
 - a. Curricular Integration – Departments can create customized ethical learning opportunities in courses (vertically and horizontally). A department member will act as champion to integrate ethics vertically throughout the department's curriculum.

- b. Course Development Integration – Faculty can redesign existing courses or create new courses to establish ethics as a prominent foundation or integral dimension.

Arrupe Center Teaching Fellowship Funding

The Arrupe Center Teaching Fellowship funding:

Individual $3,000

Joint Fellowships $4,000 (two full-time faculty members - $2,000 per person)

Guidelines for Arrupe Center Teaching Fellowships

1. Potential Arrupe Center Fellows submit proposals to Arrupe Center staff to engage in professional development activities. Proposals are evaluated based upon a) the degree to which these activities serve to integrate ethics in research, teaching, and/or student learning, b) the quality, rigor, and completeness of the proposal, c) the complementarity to the applicants' research, teaching, and faculty development plans, and d) available funds.
2. Funding is available for ethics-related course development that: a) develops a new course with ethical content or b) transforms an existing course with subsequent integration of ethical content. Funding is not available for work that is already completed, regardless of ethical content, or previously funded from another source. Applicants must specify how their teaching will substantially evolve as a result of becoming an Arrupe Center Fellow. Submissions are accepted on a rolling basis and subject to funds availability.
3. Joint Teaching Fellowship proposals are welcome as long as the lead applicant is an HSB faculty member. All applicants must be full-time, tenure-track, Saint Joseph's University faculty. Funding awards for Arrupe Center Teaching Fellows will be divided evenly amongst all applicants on a particular request.
4. An Arrupe Center Teaching stipend funding cycle starts on notification of acceptance and ends one calendar year later. One-half of stipends will be distributed upon acceptance of proposals and the remainder upon project completion.
5. You may teach year-round (on and off-load) as an Arrupe Center Teaching Fellow, but you may not participate while you are receiving University summer research grant. Your endeavors as an Arrupe Center Research Fellow should be distinct from all other ongoing funded research activities.
6. We encourage you to attend Arrupe Center campus events, especially throughout the year of your fellowship.
7. Faculty may be simultaneously eligible for more than one type of Arrupe Center Fellow appointment; however, the fellowships must involve separate and distinct work.
