Rights, Permissions and Copyright

The Saint Joseph's University's Archives and Special Collections provides copies of materials to facilitate private study, research, and scholarship. The materials found within the collections are either in the public domain and/ or may be made to be used through "fair use" of copyrighted materials as defined by copyright law.

The copyright law of the United States (Title 17 United States Code) governs the making of reproductions of copyrighted material. Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a researcher uses a reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that researcher may be liable for copyright infringement.

You are solely responsible for determining the copyright status of materials and obtaining permission to use material from the copyright holder. We reserve the right to limit the number of copies made; to restrict the use of rare and valuable items; and to deny a request because of copyright regulations, privacy rights, donor-imposed regulations, or other rights related issues.

If Saint Joseph's University does not clearly hold the copyright to an item, the Archives and Special Collections cannot grant or deny permission to use that material. The Archives and Special Collections will not do research concerning the existence and/or whereabouts of rights holders. To the extent that we provide available information, the Library does not warranty the accuracy of such information and shall not be responsible for any inaccurate information. The Archives and Special Collections will not facilitate or execute requests for permission.
